Tu Che Lajawab.

We have trapped woman in different relationship; like mother, sister, daughter, beloved, wife etc... We easily forget that beneath these makes of relationships, lies a true face of woman. And that is her real identity. A woman is a woman first then she is a mother or a daughter or wife. However, it is the biggest irony of our social system that we have forgotten this fact.

Tu Che Lajawab is a humorous attempt to highlight this serious fact. This is a story of a middle-aged woman Kaumudi Mehta, who is trapped in different relationship. She is the wife of DP - Dwarakaprasad, mother of DP's children Harry and Tanu, sister-in-law (Bhabhi) of DP's brother Prashant and his new bride Rashmi.

Kaumudi a.k.a. Moti, was the eldest sister among seven siblings. That was the reason why her parents and everybody else used to call her Moti. Not only they called her moti, but expected her to adjust with her younger siblings also. For the simple reason that she was the eldest, other siblings used to get the chocolate and she used to get mere wrapper, because as an eldest child, she was supposed to be generous and understanding.

This stamp of Moti never got erased even in her in laws' house. She was a Moti Vahu in DP's house and the adjective Moti continued to remain with her. As an eldest child, she compromises. And in her in-laws' house too, she had to compromise - because she was Moti Vahu - to the extent that the precious days of her youth got wasted.

Did she succeed in her mission? Did she ever become a complete woman? The answer lies in the hilarious production made with the twin purposes of underlining the irony of social system and entertainment.
